

Amy Turn Sharp
WRITING WORKSHOP

In my writing workshops I encourage people to write like maniacs with pencils and pens. Try it. Shut the computer and see. I'm convinced it makes something happen. Magic. Most of what you write is just getting you to the bits you need if you keep on writing. Nothing is ever trash. There are often whole stories in messy pages of your words. You have to go mining. Revising. Get to the well. Dip in.

Write every single day.

Wanna be a writer?

The best advice I can give you is to run straight into trouble. Gather your rosebuds by the bushel basket. Be ready for adventure. Tilt your head more. Swim naked. Don't wait or worry about love. Get as much as you can from loads of people. Be bold with your words. Your body. Your mind. Know what it's like to be heartbroken and go ahead and break someone else's heart too. It's just what happens. Tango with someone. Play with fire. Read the classics. Be alone. Command the room with a good story. The best stories are the ones that really happened and make you look a bit nutty. Who cares. Know what the fuck is up. Have a favorite song. Have comfort. Kiss people who need kisses. Teach others. Give it all away.

Amy Turn Sharp

ABOUT THE WORKSHOP

This workbook is the first in a series of free virtual workshops hosted by OMHG to share our love of making and collaboration. Join the writing party by sharing your work with Amy and the OMHG community (there are prizes!) where you'll find the warmest, supportive group of listeners to trust with the stories of your heart.

click here ←

ABOUT THE HOSTS

My name is Amy Turn Sharp and I'm your girl. I'm a poet and a wild one. I write poems and other such nonsense on the internet. I also work in the social space for an ad agency and freelance for magazines. I have the prerequisite first novel in a drawer at my house. I have lots of dreams. My family owns a little cottage industry called Little Alouette. We're toymakers. It's pretty cool. I wrote a poem every single day for a year. It was crazy. I'm a rebel. I'm a lover. Let's write.

WEBSITE | TWITTER | PINTEREST | INSTAGRAM

OHMy!
HANDMADE GOODNESS

Oh My! Handmade (OMHG) is a community for the head + heart + hands. We are a gathering place for open sharing of stories, skills & resources like this workshop. Whether you make things, make change, or just want to make more goodness in your life you are invited to join us!

WWW.OHMYHANDMADE.COM